TRANSFORMATIVE PEACE EDUCATION

Binay Chandra Swain

Introduction

Peace as a network of human relationships based on unity, mutuality, and the inherent worth of all persons might be interpreted as the manifestation of global justice. This concept of peace seems to be the one that is most characteristic of multicultural approaches to peace education that seek to develop appreciation of cultural differences and recognition of human dignity as the essential basis for human relations interpersonal, social and structural. It is, in so, the value base that informs human rights education (Newton, 1988).

Peace education is concerned with helping learners to develop an awareness of the problems and skills that are necessary for achieving understanding, tolerance and good will in the world today. Peace education brings together multiple traditions of pedagogy, theories of education and international initiatives for the advancement of human development through learning. The practice of peace education is an opportunity to promote the total welfare of students, advocate for their justice and equitable treatment of youth and promote individual and total responsibility for both educators and learners. It is a ~~strong~~ strategy of eliminating the conflicts and violence caused by racism, inequality and human rights violations, and implementing the various ways and means of reducing the same through appropriate teaching and learning tactics by direct of promoting responsible global citizens to attain and spread the peace in the world. Therefore peace education is a goal of education.

Newton (1988) defines "Peace Education is the attempt to ~~change~~ the development of an authentic planetary

ABSTRACT

The current study attempts to construct and standardize a Metacognitive Awareness Scale (MAS) for Under Graduate Students. The Metacognitive Awareness Scale (MAS) consisted of 34 items, ranging from 'Strongly agree' to 'Strongly Disagree', covering two dimensions: (1) Knowledge about Cognition (Declarative, Procedural and Conditional Knowledge), (2) Control and Regulation of Cognition (Planning strategies, Information strategies, Monitoring Strategies, Evaluation Strategies, Volitional Control, and Debugging Strategies). The investigator constructed the scale in two languages, i.e., in English and Assamese language. The reliability of the scale are: $r = 0.80$ and Cronbach's alpha ($\alpha = 0.94$). The reliability of the Assamese version of the scale are: $r = 0.78$ and Cronbach's alpha ($\alpha = 0.85$). To determine the validity of the Metacognitive Awareness Scale, the investigator showed the Metacognitive Awareness Scale to general experts i.e., 12 members of the Doctoral Research Committee of the Department of Education, Dibrugarh University, Assam, for seeking judgment regarding the construct's coverage. Moreover, concurrent validity is also found out by comparing the Metacognitive Awareness Scale (MAS) with Metacognitive Awareness Inventory (MAI) developed and standardized by Schraw and Deason (1994). Therefore, the coefficient of validity of the English version of the scale is 0.61. Hence, the investigator as a part of doctoral research study, constructed and standardized a Metacognitive Awareness Scale (MAS) for Under Graduate Students.

Keywords: Metacognitive Awareness, Under Graduate Students, Knowledge about Cognition, Control and Regulation of Cognition.

INTRODUCTION

Learning signifies a process that develops within a single individual throughout life. However, to be a successful learner, various components such as reflection on our learning, feedback for successful learning, and an awareness of our knowledge are essential. Moreover, a self-regulated learner is organized with their thoughts, self-motivated towards pursuing and achieving goals, self-monitoring regarding their learning process, and self-instructing for appropriate corrections in their learning process. This concept of self-regulating behavior is known as METACOGNITION. John Flavell (1973) offered an early, commonly-accepted definition of metacognition as "knowledge concerning one's cognitive processes and products of anything related to them". Metacognition refers to the cognitive control and monitoring of first-order cognitive processes. 'Meta' means 'beyond' and 'cognition' means, 'to know'. Metacognition refers to higher-order thinking, which involves an individual's active control over the cognitive processes that are engaged in learning. Metacognitive awareness helps a learner to be self-directed and self-regulated and also to be aware of one's patterns of thinking. Promoting metacognition begins with building awareness among

Goal-Orientation and Academic Performance of the Under Graduate (U.G.) Students of Dibrugarh District, Assam

Mirali Sonowal* Man Kalita

Abstract

Goal-Orientation in Undergraduate Students: This analysis explores the goal-orientation of undergraduates in the Dibrugarh District of Assam. A sample of 778 students from 12 General Degree Colleges was utilized, using the Goal-Orientation Scale (GOS) developed by Webster and Zueig (2004). Descriptive methods, standard deviation, mean, skewness, kurtosis, correlation, and ANOVA were employed for data analysis. The results indicate a correlation between academic performance and goal-orientation among the students. Additionally, no significant difference in goal-orientation was found among students in different streams (Arts, Sciences, Commerce) in the Dibrugarh District.

Keywords: Academic Performance, Goal-orientation, Under Graduate level Students, Performance goal-orientation, Mastery goal-orientation

Introduction

In an educational endeavour, an important motivational factor that has an influence on the student's academic performance is the 'Goal-orientation'. It is referred to as the student's reason for participating in a task. It serves as a valuable conceptual framework for comprehending how individuals acquire, attain, or exhibit learning and performance abilities. A key motivating factor in selection, training, and assessment is goal-orientation, or how individuals approach a task. It also refers to the disposition which focuses on developing or demonstrating ability and skills in a performance situation (Dweck, 1996). Goal-orientation influences students' emotive responses, cognitive approaches, and performance behavior. In any educational context, academic performance is highly significant since it demonstrates the students' degree of competency in terms of their educational content. It has frequently been observed that there are students with similar learning capacities and aptitudes but vastly different academic successes. Goal-orientation may thus be very important in affecting and advancing students' academic performance. In the context of various research studies and reviews of literature, several goal theorists have conceptualized the concept of goal-orientation into various frameworks. Such as the dichotomous framework consists of Learning or

Letter of Appreciation

Dear Dr. Mitali Sonowal,

I am writing to express my sincere appreciation for your collective hard work and dedication to our University. Your contributions have been invaluable to our team, and I am grateful for all that you do.

Specially, I want to recognize your outstanding work on designing curriculum of FYUGP of the Department of Education, Dibrugarh University. Your leadership and attention to detail have been instrumental in achieving our goals and exceeding our learner's expectations. Your contributions have not gone unnoticed, and I want to publicly acknowledge your efforts.

I encourage you to keep up the excellent work, and we will continue to support your growth and development within the orbit of your subject as well as discipline.

Once again, I on behalf of the BoS in Education, Dibrugarh University, thank you for all that you do. You are valued member of our team, and we appreciate your hard work and dedication.

Best regards,
